From July 9 - 15, 128 teams representing over 300 indigenous tribes from all across North America and New Zealand battled it out on basketball courts for the largest Native youth basketball tournament in the world, the 15th Annual Native American Basketball Invitational.

The NABI Tournament

kicked off with opening day ceremonies on July 9 at Copper Sky Park in Maricopa, Ariz. The event featured speakers, presentations, and prizes for the over 1,600 Native athletes from as far away as Alaska and New Zealand.

NABI is the premier basketball tournament in the country for Native American and Alaskan Native youth. Some of its greatest sponsors include the Phoenix Suns, the Phoenix Mercury, Nike N7, the Ak-Chin Indian Community, and the Gila River Indian Community.

Following a team parade of all the athletes on opening night, Gov. Stephen Roe Lewis said, "On behalf of the Gila River Indian Community, the Akimel O'otham and Pee Posh people, we're proud to stand with our ha-jun, the Ak-Chin Indian Community, for being proud sponsors of NABI this year."

He also noted the importance of youth and high school sports. "Sports builds character and it builds leadership. That's what NABI is, it's about leadership."

Ak-Chin Indian Community Chairman Robert Miguel acknowledged the growth of the NABI tournament. "It gets bigger and better every year," he said.

GRIC conserves water in Lake Mead to prevent shortage

Gila River Indian Community Gov. Stephen Roe Lewis signed a $6 million five-party partnership agreement on July 15, to stabilize Lake Mead's water levels by leaving 40,000 acre-feet of the tribe's 2017 Colorado River allocation in the lake, where it will be saved in the Colorado River system.

The Community will assist with the Lake Mead preservation efforts and also receive financial benefits.

"Today's agreement and the Community's ongoing effort to protect the Colorado River carry immense importance for our people and our neighbors across the Southwest. Being good stewards of this most sacred resource is a part of who we are as a people and what the Gila River Indian Community has stood for across time," said Gila River Indian Community Governor Stephen Roe Lewis.

"The first positive is that this agreement allows the Community to generate income today from water we otherwise would have stored off-reservation to create long-term credits for future marketing. This revenue will help our economy right now, in the present, without sacrificing our future

#BLUEWHALECHALLENGE

Blue whales conjure feelings of serenity and beauty. But do you know what the #BlueWhaleChallenge is? Your children, who speak the language of #hashtags and whose social life centers around online social spheres, probably do, and that should spur you to action.

Do you know what the #bluewhalechallenge is? Your children probably do.

The Blue Whale Challenge is a “game” overseen by online predators who pursue vulnerable children and teens, recruiting them to join a challenge whose completion demands only one outcome – suicide. The challenge is as easy as your child typing a hashtag to Instagram or Facebook which alerts a “curator” to set up a 50-day program of tasks and challenges that include self-harming behaviors. If a child attempts to back out of a certain task or the program, the curator will manipulate him

The Gila River Indian Community has established an initiative encouraging all people to come together and spread awareness of suicide prevention. We say Yes to Life! Every life is worth saying YES to. Be aware of warning signs, learn how to intervene and what resources are available. To learn more, visit GRHC.ORG.

Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Senator McCain:

On behalf of the Gila River Indian Community, I write to say that you, Cindy and your entire family are in the thoughts and prayers of our people and our leaders, as you are right now for so many Americans. I know I speak for every Community member when I express my deep appreciation for your years of service in Washington, and your strong leadership on Native American issues and Arizona issues during your time in the House and Senate. We are all better off for knowing you and for having had the opportunity to work closely with you. We need you back on Capitol Hill in good health as soon as possible, sir.

On a personal note, I want to take a moment to tell you how what an honor it is to be able to call you a professional colleague and a friend. Your commitment to public service and your boundless energy to help your fellow Americans is more than impressive – it's an inspiration to anyone who aspires to hold office in the spirit of serving the public. Thank you for all you have done and for all you will do in the days ahead.

It goes almost without saying that all of America is rooting for you, Senator. If there's a person alive who can beat cancer, it is you. You, your loved ones and your staff have our best wishes and all the strength we can send your way in this fight. We hope to see you back to full strength very soon.

Sincerely,

GRIC Youth attend basketball camp hosted by the NBA and NABI

Thomas R. Throssell
Gila River Indian News

While 128 teams were battling it out on the court for the 15th Annual Native American Basketball Invitational, 100 incoming high school freshman, six from the Gila River Indian Community, were hard at work training with NBA legends at the Jr. NBA Youth Camp at NABI for Native American Youth held at the Copper Sky Recreation Complex in Maricopa, Ariz., from July 10 – 12.

The NBA and NABI teamed up to host the three-day camp, which featured NBA players, coaches, and league staff, including pro legends A.C. Greene, Cederic Ceballos, Hall of Famer Annie Meyers-Drysdale, and Sacramento Kings Head Coach Dave Joerger.

The six Gila River teenagers who participated in the camp are: Cathauli Sanchez, Jasmine Mills, Ambrina Laws, Anthony Escalante Jr., Damon Evans, and overall basketball camp MVP, Nickolas Harrison.

The camp is a spinoff of the NBA's Basketball Without Borders international program, which has hosted basketball camps in 30 cities, 25 countries, and six continents.

GinaMarie Scarpa, NABI President and co-founder, said because Native American communities are sovereign nations they fall under the NBA's global initiative, which is how the Jr. NBA Youth Camp at NABI for Native American Youth initially came to life.

"[The NBA] had an initiative last year to reach out to Indian Country," she said. "With the NABI Foundation and our NABI tournament, which is a national tournament, at any given year we represent over 300 tribes, so they really wanted that high representation [to get] higher outreach. Partnering up with the NABI Foundation was the way to do it," she said.

During the short but intensive camp, NBA players and staff worked with the young men and women to develop their game, from ball handling drills to improving their defensive skills.

The Gila River Fire Department had plenty to celebrate at the Arizona Fire Service 2017 Leadership Conference, a joint conference of the Arizona Fire Chiefs Association (AFCA) and the Arizona Fire District Association (AFDA). GRFD Chief Thomas Knapp won the AFCA's Chief Fire Officer of the Year award during the opening session at Renaissance Phoenix Glendale Hotel & Spa on July 11. Knapp, with his over 35 years of fire and emergency service experience, was humbled by the honor and credited the people who helped shape his career. "I've worked with incredible people, I've had incredible mentors," said Knapp. Gov. Stephen Roe Lewis, recognized Knapp in a statement saying Knapp's award was a memorable day for Chief Knapp and the Gila River Indian Community. "This recognition bestowed upon Chief Knapp is well deserved for his dedication, leadership, and commitment in making our Community safer and having our fire department become a highly trained and professional department. It's been through Chief Knapp's vision and leadership that the men and women of our fire department can be proud of a job well done." In his acceptance speech Knapp, who has been Fire Chief since 2010, credited the Gila River Indian Community for giving him the chance to have success. "And finally to the Gila River Indian Community for allowing me the opportunity to perform what I love, to do my job as a fire chief with a great staff." Knapp said that GRFD takes approximately 6,500 calls a year from 4 stations that cover about 600 square miles. Knapp has developed several programs within GRIC including the Fire Prevention Bureau, Fire Arson Team, a Management Intern Program, mentorship program and career development opportunities. He is also a board member for several organizations including the AFCA, on which he serves as the Tribal Nations Section Chair and Vice President of the Native American Fire Chief's Association. Chief Knapp has been instrumental in improving GRFD's operations and partnerships with its Maricopa and Pinal County partners, as well as improving relationships between Native American fire agencies and others in Arizona. "We've had a good impact on not only tribal fire departments but statewide," said Knapp.

District Three (Sacaton):

Aggravated Assault – The victim called dispatch reporting the suspect, who was a family member had stabbed her with a knife. Upon the Officers arrival further investigation revealed the suspect and victim was talking when the conversation escalated into an argument. At which time the suspect cut the victim with the knife. The victim was able to call police and was later transported to Chandler Regional for further medical treatment.

Status: Under Investigation

Aggravated Assault – The victim called dispatch in regards to the suspect attempting to stab the victim by chasing the victim throughout the residence with a dangerous weapon. The suspect and victim were both at the residence when officers arrived. The suspect caused criminal damage to the residence by throwing a folding chair at the residence front door and stabbing the bedroom door with a knife.

Status: Suspect was booked into jail

Burglary– Officers responded to a work shop that reported their building had been burglarized. The investigation revealed the suspect had damaged the front door during the course of the burglary. Inside a dolly had been taken and a portable a/c unit removed.

Status: Under investigation

Theft – A security door was taken from one of the residence under repairs that belongs to the Department of Community Housing. The removal of the door caused extensive damage to the door frame and surrounding stucco of the residence. Evidence located at the scene will be processed and was placed into evidence.

Status: Under Investigation

Theft – A 2006 CAT Model 420S (backhoe) was taken from a construction site. Officers were able to locate the tractor due to the equipment having a GPS installed. The coordinates were given and an officer was able to locate the tractor and the suspect who admitted to taking the tractor with intentions of selling it.

Status: Suspect was arrested and booked into jail.

Theft – The victim requested officers to their residence due to money being taken. The officer was informed money had been removed and the case is under investigation.

Status: Under Investigation

District Four (Stotonic Area):

Theft – Officers responded to a construction site where one of the employees reported a flatbed trailer and one hundred traffic cones had been taken. The employee stated the items were there the day prior when the crew left for the day. The items were entered in NCIC (National Crime Information Center) as stolen

Status: Under Investigation

District Four (Lone Butte Area):

Auto Theft – Victim reported to police her vehicle had been taken without permission by a male subject who she had met through a friend. When she exited the Casino she walked over to valet to retrieve her vehicle. She was informed the vehicle was given back to the male who had initially had the vehicle parked. The vehicle was entered into NCIC (National Crime Information Center) as stolen.

Status: Under Investigation

Burglary – Suspect committed burglary by breaking the lock and entering the water treatment office building and taking an item from the area.

Status: Under Investigation

District Five (Casa Blanca):

Quarterly Per Capita payment distribution July 31 for adults and trust accounts

Mikhail Sundust
Gila River Indian News

The per capita payment distribution for July 31 has been announced.

Adult recipients will receive $338.02 and $331.50 will be deposited into minor trust accounts.

The per capita payment amount is determined by 11 percent of net gaming revenues being sent to fund the Per Capita Office. After administrative costs, including office expenses, trust administration expenses and payments to third party vendors, and after adjustments made for previous payments, the fund is divided among eligible members.

Community members enrolled to receive per capita payments can choose to receive their distribution in the form of a Bank of America debit card, via direct deposit into their personal checking account, or via paper check.

To change the method of payment, Community members can visit the Per Capita Office in the Governance Center in Sacaton. For further questions, call (520) 562-5222.

A painless lesson on s-ko'ok

The O'otham word s-ko'ok is used when talking about something that is hurting, aching or in pain. It is often used in association with your body (em honshpadag) either as a whole or some specific part that is suffering from some ailment. For example, to say that you have a headache in O'otham you would say s-ko'ok heg eñ mo'o. This phrase starts off with s-ko'ok which here acts as a verb describing a state or condition, in this case that of being in pain. The rest of the phrase specifies to the listener who and what part of the body is experiencing the pain. In this example the two important parts that describe this are the possessive pronoun and the body part word. The possessive pronoun here is the word eñ which here means "my" and tells the listener that it's the person speaking who is hurting. The last word in this example is the body part which here is the O'otham word mo'o and refers to the head.

The phrase s-ko'ok heg _____ can be easily changed to talk about other body parts and can also be modified to talk about other people, simply by substituting the body part word or the possessive pronoun. For example, if you wanted to say that your elbow hurts you would substitute the O'otham word for elbow si:sh in the place of mo'o to come up with the new phrase s-ko'ok heg eñ si:sh. Similarly, if you wanted to say your shoulder hurts you would just change the word si:sh for the O'otham word for shoulder, kothva, to come up with the phrase s-ko'ok heg eñ kothva. But let's say you wanted to say that it wasn't your shoulder hurting but instead was the shoulder of the person you were speaking to. In this case you would change the possessive pronoun which in the original sentence was eñ "my" and refers the person speaking to em "your" which is the possessive pronoun that refers to the person being spoken to. This would result in the new phrase s-ko'ok heg em kothva which means "your shoulder is hurting." If you wanted to talk about a third person (someone not in the conversation) you would get rid of the pronoun altogether and add a -j suffix to the body part term. This can be seen in the example s-ko'ok heg kothvaj which is the way to say "his/her shoulder is hurting" in O'otham. Notice that in this sentence there is no possessive pronoun word before the body part term and that the word for shoulder kothva has an added -j ending.

S-ko'ok can be used in other phrases. A very simple question in O'otham to ask someone if something hurts is No s-ko'ok? Incidentally this is also used to ask if something is hot in the sense of having a lot of chile as s-ko'ok is also used to describe the burn that one gets from eating chile. The question does it hurt (No s-ko'ok?) in O'otham can also be made more specific by adding a body part word and personal pronoun. If you wanted to ask a person if their head hurts you could say No s-ko'ok heg em mo'o?. Just like in our original sentences we have a body part word mo'o 'head' as well as a personal pronoun em 'your' to make the sentence more specific. If you wanted to

S-ko'ok heg eñ vo:k

S-ko'ok heg eñ tho:n

S-ko'ok heg eñ kothva

S-ko'ok heg eñ u:ksh

ask if someone else's head is hurting you can drop the pronoun altogether and add the suffix -j at the end of the body part term to come up with No s-ko'ok heg mo'oj? To ask if someone has a sore throat (if their throat hurts) you can say No s-ko'ok heg em ba'ithk? if you are directly speaking to them or No s-ko'ok heg ba'ithkaj? if you are asking someone else on their behalf.

Another useful question using s-ko'ok is asking someone where something hurts. To do this in O'otham you use the phrase Ba: hasko s-ko'ok? which literally asks "Where does it hurt?". This question makes use of the O'otham word ba: which is the shortened form of the word hebai/hebi and means "where" as well as the word hasko which means "someplace." These two words are often used together when making questions that ask for a specific location. A simple reply to this question in O'otham uses the part of the body with the personal pronoun eñ followed by the location word eđ. For example, to say 'in my head' you would say eñ mo'o eđ as a reply to the question Ba: hasko s-ko'ok?. So just by knowing the names for the parts of the body you can answer the question Ba: hasko s-ko'ok? and state whether it's your head (mo'o), arm (nov), stomach (vo:k), leg (kayio), knee (tho:n) or foot (thad) that hurts.

Tribal Education Department sponsors youth for Washington D.C. trip

Communications & Public Affairs Department
Gila River Indian Community

The Tribal Education Department recently sponsored 15 youth from the Gila River Indian Community to visit Washington D.C. for a week of learning and sightseeing, June 18 - 23.

The individuals selected for the trip were recent high school graduates and recipients of the 2017 Citizenship Award which was presented to students that demonstrated exceptional character traits and citizenship. The trip was packed with opportunities for the youth to learn about history and visit numerous historical landmarks.

One advantage the group had was utilizing a private tour guide which provided the opportunity to learn about each historical site in depth. The group visited national monuments, which included the Lincoln Memorial, Vietnam Memorial, World War II Memorial, Jefferson Memorial, Marine Corps War Memorial and the Martin Luther King Jr. Memorial.

Visiting the monuments allowed the students to gain a greater understanding of the history of our country as well as the sacrifices made. While there was a tight schedule to keep the students were eager to keep learning. Next on the agenda was visiting the Natural History Museum, the International Spy Museum, Smithsonian National Museum of the American Indian and the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum.

Visiting the Holocaust Memorial Museum was a very emotional experience. Witnessing some of the horrific imagery and hearing stories from those who survived was enlightening for many of the youth. After visiting the various museums the next stop was Arlington National Cemetery to witness the Changing of the Guard and to visit the grave of Ira Hayes. Several of the students joined together to sing a song in O'otham to honor him while visiting the gravesite.

The last portion of the trip, they visited the United States Capitol for a fascinating guided tour of the building. The tour showcased beautiful artwork, described the history of the building and illustrated how it has evolved into the magnificent building it is today. One of the final highlights of the trip was visiting Akin Gump Strauss Hauer & Feld, which represents the Gila River Indian Community in various legal issues. The youth were able to engage in a question and answer session, over a nice hot breakfast, with attorney Jason Hauter. Mr. Hauter is a Community member who has worked with the Akin and Gump firm for several years, and he was happy to engage with the group and answer any and all questions asked of him.

The trip was an overall great experience for those selected to attend. After five days braving the humidity in Washington D.C. the group returned back to Arizona with more knowledge and great memories!

KISS program makes learning about car seats a breeze

Thomas R. Throssell/GRIN

The training program was filled with mothers wanting to learn more about how to better keep their children safe through proper car seat installation.

Gila River Indian News

At first, finding the right car seat for your child may seem like one of the easier tasks of raising a child, however, once you start researching which seat to purchase the floodgates of information rip wide open and what once seemed like an easy task has suddenly become a massive headache.

Luckily, you aren't alone. The Tribal Health Department's Gila River Injury Prevention Kids in Safety Seats (KISS) program has got your back and is ready to show you which car seat to get and how to properly install it.

That's not all. They will even give you a free car seat for attending one of their car seat safety classes.

For Teri J. De La Cruz, Injury Prevention Technician, who has been teaching car seat safety classes throughout the Gila River Indian Community, it is important for parents to learn to properly install their child's car seat and understand the consequences of improperly installed seats.

"We are just trying to make parents more aware of the safety of car seats for babies all the way up to having your kids in a booster seat up to the age of 12 if needed," De La Cruz said. "We are trying to save lives by informing parents. We see car crashes, at least here in Gila River, five a month, and some of them, the kids are not in car seats."

She said that many parents have the misconception if they are driving a short distance from home, to their local supermarket down the road or nearby post office, that their child will be fine riding in their vehicle unrestrained.

"They think they will just run down the road. The important thing is to always, always put your baby in the car seat, even if you are just going a couple of blocks," De La Cruz said. "These are your children and it only takes a couple of seconds to buckle up your baby."

"You just never know when you are going to have to slam the brakes, or you might hit something suddenly where the baby will fly out [of the car seat] if the child is not restrained," she said. "These are fragile bodies still and having an impact on the console, on the back of the seat, can cause severe head trauma and severe injuries to the body."

On July 11, Community members took part in a car seat safety class held at the Sacaton Dialysis Center. De La Cruz explained the benefits of each type of child restraint, the infant, convertible, combination, and booster seats, and which one is most appropriate for an infant all the way to 12-years of age.

The Community members in attendance watched a detailed video on car seat safety and asked De La Cruz questions about which seats they should get for their children. Shortly after, free car seats were handed out to those attending the class and were led to the parking lot where De La Cruz made sure everyone installed their chosen car seat correctly.

"Our program is a federally funded program, so all [tribal members] are invited to come get a car seat," she said. "We give away four car seats in our program, a convertible, a combination, a highback booster and a no back booster. We service all the districts here, we try to get to every district every month."

If you are interested in learning more about car seat safety or would like to receive a free car seat, call the Gila River Injury Prevention Kids in Safety Seats (KISS) program at (520) 550-8000 or email Verena Jackson at verena.jackson@gric.nsn.us or Teri De La Cruz at teri.delacruz@gric.nsn.us

The next car seat training classes will be held on Aug. 15 from 10 a.m. – 12 p.m. at the Sacaton Dialysis Center and Aug. 23 from 10 a.m. – 12 p.m. at Komatke Health Care.

The Native American's right to vote wasn't easy to obtain. Dr. Carlos Montezuma, Yavapai, advocated for the Native right to vote in 1924, and in 1928 Peter Porter and Rudolph Johnson, Gila River Indian Community members, sought their voting rights but were denied by the Arizona Supreme Court. In 1948, the Arizona Supreme Court confirmed the voting rights of Native Americans when two Yavapai men, Frank Harrison and Harry Austin filed a lawsuit to secure their right to vote. Judge Levi S. Udall wrote, "To deny the right to vote where one is legally entitled to do so, is to do violence to the principles of freedom and equality."

With all this history in mind the Gila River Voter Registration Board sponsored the Arizona Native Right to Vote Celebration at the Boys & Girls Club - Komatke Branch in District 6 on July 15. The Voter Registration Board is a group dedicated to the registration of GRIC voters.

The celebration included tribal leaders, special remarks, raffle prizes, breakfast and lunch and a traditional dance from Achem Aa'l.

In 2011, former GRIC governor William R. Rhodes proclaimed July 15 as the "Gila River Indian Community Native American Right To Vote Day." Gov. Stephen Roe

Lewis, who is reaffirming Rhodes's proclamation, emphasized the historical battle Native Americans, particularly in Arizona, have had in the right to vote. "We can never take our right to vote for granted," he said.

Gov. Lewis also implored GRIC members to increase their participation in upcoming elections. "We really need to raise the voting levels in Gila River."

Lt. Gov. Monica An-

tone also thanked the Voter Registration Board and their efforts to register voters. "Keep the outreach going," Lt. Gov. Antone said. She also acknowledged the Ft. McDowell Yavapai Nation and their contributions in the fight to secure voting rights for Native Americans. Gail Hunnicutt, the granddaughter of Frank Harrison, attended the celebration.

Voter Registration Board Chairperson Zuzette Kisto said her goal is to empower the Community members to vote and, "to provide resourceful information that would educate the average voter on issues that affect Native country. And encourage them to practice their right to vote."

The Voter Registration Board members are Zuzette Kisto, Jackie Thomas

(Vice-Chairperson), Rebecca Kisto (Treasurer), Bonnie Lyons (Secretary), Joyce McAfee, Joella Velasco, Sheri Bodmer, Valerie Webb, Darlene Burnette, Jeanette Pedro, Joyce Lopez, and Jovida Antone.

Miguel also recognized the City of Maricopa and the strong bond between Ak-Chin and GRIC. "We're family," he said.

The opening day ceremonies persisted with a presentation by NABI sponsor Nike N7 and a fireworks show.

Games were played around the Valley including Maricopa and in District 5 at the Vah-Ki Multipurpose Building. Gov. Lewis appreciated the District 5 Recreation Committee and staff. "Thank you to District 5 for successfully hosting NABI games for our youth."

Playing basketball teaches hustle and discipline, said coach Rudy Flores of the Gila River Boys. "The more discipline they have, the more focused they are on whatever they're doing," he said. These values are transferable to the real world when they need determination at work or school.

Flores is from District 5, where the Boys' Tuesday game against N8V Thunder took place. They dropped that game, but win or lose, Flores said, "it's all hustle, hustle." Flores would like to see his boys succeed in life. He said, "If they have that talent, I want them to use that talent. I want them to have that opportunity to be out there and go to school."

Likewise, Edward Lucero, coach for the girls' team Snaketown, said playing basketball instills life-lessons in the youth, like family values and healthy living. Both of his daughters play for Snaketown and both, he said, have abstained from drugs and alcohol because of it.

Lucero said basketball has the power to bring families together. "The family aspect of it is the most important thing for me," he said. "Basketball has been very, very good for us...hanging out with each other and teaching and going to [different] places."

Snaketown didn't win its Tuesday matchup against A1 Elite, but the team continued to put up more of a fight as the game developed.

Two other teams from the Gila River Indian Community competed in the tournament. The Gila River Girls pounded the hardwood and learned some hard-fought lessons to bring back to the court next year.

The GR Hawks showed the most promise among the four GRIC squads, qualifying for the Boys' Silver Division Tournament. After handing losses to the AZ Outlaws and the Young Bucks, the Hawks fell in a nail-biter to the T.O. Storm.

On July 15, four teams, representing some of Indian Country's most talented basketball players went head-to-head at the Talking Stick Resort Arena where the Cheyenne Arapaho boys' team and Yakama Nation girls' team took home the tournament's gold division championship.

The championship, which featured four games split into silver and gold divisions, was the culmination of this year's NABI tournament where 64 boys teams and 64 girls teams, faced-off in over 300 games played during a span of seven days.

Boys' Gold Division

In the boy's gold division, five-time NABI champions the Cheyenne Arapaho, out of Concho, Okla., played against The Lower Sioux, of Morton, Minn.

The Arapaho team, who were runners-up in last year's NABI tournament, began the game slow with just 8-points scored against the Sioux's 30, with only 6-minutes left on the clock in the first half.

The Sioux's large lead was short-lived however, as the Arapaho picked up their pace and began dominating offensively, closing the gap by the end of the first half, 35-24.

During the second half the Arapaho gained the lead and kept it until the buzzer marked the end of the game and clinched the team's sixth NABI championship, the score 75-71, Arapaho.

Girls' Gold Division

The girls' gold division game began with the Yakama Nation from Washington and the NN Elite out of Houck, Ariz., playing a highly competitive game, with each team scoring almost every time they had possession of the ball. Yakama led the game at the half, 32-27.

During the second half NN Elite climbed within one point of Yakama, but couldn't keep pace with the Washington-based team as they began to flounder after giving up 13 points with no response.

Yakama Nation closed out the game, 64-50, grabbing the girls' gold division championship.

Boys' Silver Division

The Barrow Whalers out of Sells, Ariz., and the only O'odham team to make it to the NABI championship faced the San Carlos Chiefs, out of San Carlos, Ariz., in the boys' silver division.

The game was typical of rezball, physical, high scoring, and fast-paced with both teams neck and neck as the clock wound down during the first half. With only minutes left on the board, the Whalers picked up their pace, pushing to a 10-point lead due Tahja Mayberry's aggressive play-making and Lionel Nez's outstanding perimeter shooting.

The Whalers continued to play strong, leading the game with just five minutes left. With the clock counting down, the Whaler's began to slow their pace on the court, scoring less and less each time they had possession of the ball. The Chiefs capitalized on the games changed momentum, gaining a 12-point lead and winning the boys' silver division championship, 87-75.

The Whalers is a misnomer. The team is actually called Three Nations with boys from the Tohono O'odham Nation, Gila River, and the Navajo Nation. However, due to administrative complications they are listed as the Barrow Whalers with NABI.

Girls' Silver Division

In a lopsided match between the Elite N8Vs of Gallup, N.M., and Waziyata Unpi out of Fort Yates, N.D., the N8Vs dominated the first half of the game with the help of Amanda Mitchell's string of three-pointers. N8Vs led the game at halftime with a score of 25-11.

Waziyata continued to fight against N8Vs powerhouse offense, and with 2-minutes left in the game, slowed their pace and struggled to hold their defense together.

The N8Vs took the girls' silver division championship with a final score of 48-26.

DEQ employee and recent grad has interest in environmental issues

Christopher Lomahquahu
Gila River Indian News

At her office at the Department of Environmental Quality, Althea Walker, an Environmental Education & Outreach Specialist, talked about her aspirations and what she's been able to accomplish in the year since graduating with her Masters in Environmental Technology Management from Arizona State University.

"I'm not your traditional college student, I didn't go to college right out of high school," said Walker, "I started in the business program, I thought I wanted to go into engineering... and then I finally realized I want to go into environmental protection."

She said a chance visit with a University of Arizona Professor Karletta Chief, who works at the Department of Soil, Water and Environmental Science, sparked her interest on the environmental issues shared among American Indians.

"I remember a Navajo lady talking about being a hydrologist and coming from her home on the Navajo Nation and speaking about the environmental issues and how she brought her education back to her community...so that was part of the inspiration on choosing environmental protection as a field of interest," said Walker.

Walker said, that her education and job go hand-in-hand, that she is able to gain exposure from each of the areas of service DEQ works within.

Christopher Lomahquahu/GRIN

Althea Walker, at her graduation, is using her knowledge to make an impact at DEQ.

One of the driving factors behind her work is seeing other Native professionals who share a similar passion for protecting the environment.

She said, "Just seeing more and more through the years other Natives doing [this] kind of work, protecting the environment is really empowering. Especially when you attend conferences and see a room full of Natives and they're all doing something that they love with their education."

Walker said that her position allows her to get a well-rounded experience of everything associated with protecting the environment.

"It's a good position to be in to learn...especially coming right out of college and you continually learn a lot," said Walker, "Working with our program [here] I'm not secluded to just one area, I get exposed to all areas."

Walker hopes to continue building her level of knowledge while helping Community members get a better understanding of the kinds of monitoring her department conducts to keep the environment safe and how it is related to their health.

"It's taking every opportunity to educate about the importance of environmental protection in a way that is personal to them... so if [you] think about air quality and how it affects your upper respiratory system and other ways it affects their health," said Walker.

Since her department works with vast amounts of data on the environment, Walker said she tries to translate that information into something that is useful.

She has aspirations of getting a Ph.D. in sustainability that she hopes will elevate her journey into playing a more integral role building a cleaner more eco-friendly future.

"Eventually I want to take on more responsibilities and be able to be in a position of influence through a leadership role... but we'll see how that goes. It may not happen that way, but as long as I get to do the work along the lines of what I do now post doctorate, I'll be satisfied with that," said Walker.

She said opportunities to help college students on the rise is two-fold, because on the one hand it shows there's an interest in protecting the environment and second, it offers her a chance to mentor students that want to make a positive change in the Community.

Walker said, "To help influence another Community member to get them into environmental protection, who is eager to do it...I find that rewarding and hopefully they can stay [here] within the department and work along the lines of what they're studying in school."

AILDI Training focuses on the preservation of Native languages

Christopher Lomahquahu
Gila River Indian News

Language is more than a means of communicating, it is a form of identity that is used to distinguish one group of people to another.

The University of Arizona American Indian Language Development Institute held a training for Community members that focused on integrating indigenous languages into a more formal teaching settings. The training was held at the District 3 Head Start building on July 10.

AILDI hosts annual summer session trainings in different tribal communities. This year's training was coordinated in collaboration with the Tribal Education Department and AILDI Project Coordinator Alyce Sadongei from July 10 to 20.

Other AILDI staff presenters included institute Director Ofelia Zepeda, of the Tohono O'odham Nation, who is a highly regarded professor of linguistics at U of A.

She talked about the Native American Language Act of 1990, which established federal policy recognizing the language rights of indigenous people across the United States.

Zepeda said she was a part of like-minded individuals who developed a legislative proposal that could help promote indigenous language, which was a response to the "English Only" movement of the 1980's to make it the National language.

The 10-day session is unlike any other symposium on indigenous languages because it presents language in the context of a living thing that requires nourishment that can only be satisfied through teaching the younger generation of Natives peoples.

Language has significant impact in the lives of tribal members and those who work for tribal communities regarding language and language education within the community and the school and of course in the family.

Zepeda talked about her role in making indigenous languages official languages for several states that adopted a language other than English.

"The way that I talk about it is from my own experience, because I was involved with [this] particular document in the beginning stages of it, because it started out as a meeting of individuals from various Native language speaking tribes to get together that was hosted by the Native American Language Issues Institute," said Zepeda.

Christopher Lomahquahu/GRIN

The University of Arizona and the Tribal Education Department collaborated on educational training held at the District 3 Head Start Building on July 10.

She said the creation of NALA is for those in language education that can take advantage of this particular policy for their school's and community's advantage when it comes to language planning and promotion

Zepeda said, "Language isn't like an animal, it will never die, it will always be there, but it won't be quite the same...you can keep it from making a dramatic change over time from what it was in the past."

From her perspective, language should not be placed on a self like an object or hung on a wall like art.

She said, "Once placed on a wall it can never be fully appreciated, but to be used in order for it to be carried on from one generation to the next. [It] either adapts or goes away, and so it is our responsibility to promote the use of indigenous languages."

Others topics covered at the training included subjects like oral immersion, storytelling and discussions on ideologies and philosophy based on metaphors in indigenous language.

One of the presenters, Sheila Nicholas, who is from the Hopi Tribe and teaches at the U of A in indigenous language and maintenance and revitalization said in her culture, being able to speak the language is held in high regard, because it fully establishes the concept of what it means to be a Hopi, among other aspect of life among her people.

For the students, she cautions that language does not always translate well into English and vice versa, but for them to always have a creative approach in describing objects and things to their students.

"When we think about language, it actually starts at conception...as parents, we have to understand that, that first step is being able to speak the language to our children," said Nicholas, "What is the role of language in a child's life, is always under question, but I think where it stands, it encompasses everything around them and what they see."

Gila River Hotel & Casinos unveil THE CARD

CHANDLER, ARIZ. – Gila River Gaming Enterprises, Inc., operator of the Gila River Casinos three Phoenix-area properties – Wild Horse Pass Hotel & Casino, Lone Butte Casino and Vee Quiva Hotel & Casino – announced today the launch of THE Card™ by Gila River Hotels & Casinos.

"At Gila River Hotels & Casinos we are known for exceeding our guests' expectations in all aspects of our hotel and casino experience, and our loyalty program is no different," said Kenneth Manuel, CEO of Gila River Gaming Enterprises, Inc. "Now with THE Card, our Players Club members can accumulate points even faster, making it easier to earn incredible rewards."

THE Card features Emerald, Ruby, Gold and Platinum tiers that offer exciting perks and benefits. The more points guests earn, the higher their status and access to exclusive perks.

Now with THE Card, guests will be able to:

- Earn new and enhanced rewards including same-day cash back and free play playing slots, table games or bingo
- Win Gila River Casino comps at more than 30 convenient locations at all three of the Gila River properties such as the award-winning Shula's Steak House and the exciting Ovation LIVE! Showroom

- Score other comps including tickets to watch sports teams like the Arizona Diamondbacks and concerts at Gila River Arena

- Enjoy convenient Players Club account management – guests can review balances, points, rewards and manage their account online or on the new Gila River Casinos app

THE Card is not property-specific. All the points guests earn with THE Card count toward their rewards status, and can be used across any of the three Gila River properties.

The number of base points guests earn annually determines their status. And the higher their status, the more exclusive the perks. If, at any time during the year, guests earn enough base points to qualify for a higher tier status, the guests will receive a new card. At the end of the year, the guests' base points will be tallied and their status for the next year will be determined.

To celebrate the launch of THE Card, Gila River Hotels & Casinos will kick off a new promotion during the months of July and August called $1,000,000 Pick THE Card. Each night, 16 Players Club members will be selected to play $1,000,000 Pick THE Card -- securing a shot at winning up to $1 million and other incredible prizes. The contest will be played every Monday night at Vee Quiva Hotel & Casino, every Tuesday night at Lone Butte Casino and every Wednesday night at Wild Horse Pass Hotel & Casino.

To maintain the momentum of THE Card, Gila River Hotels & Casinos will offer a $25,000 new member sweepstakes for all new Players Club members. Guests who enroll in the loyalty program will instantly win up to $1,000 in free play; they also will be entered into a drawing in which Gila River Hotels & Casinos is giving away an additional $25,000 in free play.

Learn more about THE Card at THECardbyGilaRiverCasinos.com or visit the Players Club at any of the three Gila River Hotels & Casinos properties.

Jr. NBA from Page 3

NBA Coordinator Maria Laterza (center) warms up a group of young girls during the Jr. NBA Basketball Camp on July 12.

On July 12, former Phoenix Suns forward, Ceballos, stood in the center of the recreation center's indoor basketball court with kids sitting around him in a semi-circle intently listening. He explained to the kids the camp is not to just learn about basketball, it is to learn about yourself and how to positively move forward through life.

"The biggest thing is just getting around other kids, so they can get some competition in," he said. "Sometimes you kind of get stuck in your own environment playing against the same people all the time, when they have camps like this for Native Americans all over the [country], you see different faces, different styles of basketball, which helps you out too."

Fourteen-year-old Mills, from District 5, said the camp helped her improve her skill on the court, and pumped up her motivation to continue playing the game.

"I learned how to square up to the basket, how to box out somebody, and to actually get the rebound and put it back up," said Jasmine. "They tell you things about what they did long ago, they tell you and it can encourage someone to actually come out and show the talent that they got. That is why they come out here and do these because they know we have the talent and ability to do it," she said.

Coach Joerger, said the camp is just the beginning and they are looking forward to hosting more across Indian Country in the future.

"It's a fantastic program, the NBA is very involved in all parts of basketball in the world and for them to want to put on this event through the Jr. NBA is just terrific," said Joerger. "The vibe in the gym, the kids are having a good time, they are learning, not just about basketball but different aspects of the education part of it and it's just a terrific deal."

or our water.

“Second, this agreement helps conserve water in Lake Mead. That conservation effort benefits our people and every resident of Arizona by helping to protect the Colorado River and our water future.”

Added Governor Lewis: “Given the central role of water in our economy and our culture, today’s agreement is truly a cause for celebration.”

In return, the tribe will receive a total of $6 million from the four participating signatories, which include the United States Bureau of Reclamation (USBR), the Arizona Department of Water Resources (AZDWR), the City of Phoenix, and the Walton Foundation, Inc.

An ADWR press release said the participating parties have agreed to pay the tribe for its conservation effort, with the state of Arizona contributing $2 million, the city of Phoenix $2 million, the USBR $1 million, and the Walton Foundation $1 million.

At the signing, which was held at the ADWR in Phoenix, Ariz., Gov. Lewis said the agreement was an important step towards addressing issues caused by the region’s persistent drought.

“I want to thank everyone sincerely for being involved in making today’s agreement happen, to help protect the Colorado River and secure our water future,” he said. “Back in March, the Arizona Department of Water Resources, the city of Phoenix, the Walton Foundation, and the Community agreed to work together to address the persistent drought impacting our region. Through our collective efforts and with the cooperation with the Bureau of Reclamation, we were able to reach an historical agreement to conserve another 40,000-acre-feet of Colorado River water to help protect Lake Mead’s water levels,” Lewis said.

He noted the agreement, will help conserve water in Lake Mead, which benefits all residents of Arizona including GRIC, and allows the tribe to generate income that will help its own economy.

“Given the central role of water in our economy and our culture, today’s agreement is truly a cause for celebration,” Lewis said in the ADWR press release.

The release said the five partners see the agreement as a down payment for an Arizona-based plan, which will aid in protecting the Colorado River system reservoir from years of drought that have caused water levels to rapidly drop in recent years.

The plan, which is called the Drought Contingency Plan, is an effort by local Arizona leaders to keep Lake Mead’s water levels above the first shortage trigger, which has been set at an elevation of 1,075 feet.

According to Terry Fulp, Regional Director of the Bureau of Reclamation’s Lower Colorado Region, as of today Lake Mead’s current elevation is 1,079 feet, just four feet from the first shortage trigger, which will cause the federal government to declare a water shortage and begin a reduction in water supplies to surrounding states.

“Today, Lake Mead is at an elevation of 1,079 [feet] above sea level, that is about 10-million-acre-feet of water storage, but it’s only about 38 percent full,” said Fulp. “It is about 120 feet down from where it was in September of 1999. So 40,000 acre-feet, that is about half-a-foot on Mead given were it is today.”

Fulp said contributions

Thomas R. Throssell/GRIN

The U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, Gila River Indian Community (GRIC), State Of Arizona, City of Phoenix and Walton Family Foundation (WFF) agreed to conserve a major portion of the GRIC’s Central Arizona Project (CAP) water entitlement to secure Lake Mead’s water supply.

New Native film follows story on the Pine Ridge Reservation

Courtesy of InYo Entertainment
“Neither Wolf, Nor Dog” follows a writer’s journey through the Pine Ridge Reservation.

Christopher Lomahquahu
 Gila River Indian News

A film about historical trauma and a personal quest for understanding is captured in a movie set against the backdrop of the Pine Ridge Reservation in South Dakota.

“Neither Wolf, Nor Dog,” was adapted from Kent Nerburn’s 1996 novel of the same name.

The film is showing in limited release at Harkins Movie Theatres across Arizona, and is directed by Scottish Director Steven Lewis Simpson.

It was funded through a Kickstarter campaign. Kickstarter is an online crowd sourced funding website that financially supports various creative projects.

The story follows writer Nerburn, played by Christopher Sweeney, who travels to the Pine Ridge Reservation on an anonymous call to write the stories of an elder who goes by the name Dan.

Portrayed by Dave Bald Eagle, Dan is an Oglala Lakota with a story to tell, that’s not just of his own, but also of the Lakota people, and a very traumatic episode in the history of his people and the United States.

Although Nerburn believes Dan has tasked him with the impossible, it becomes clear that in order to accurately tell the stories of the Lakota people, it requires an empathetic approach.

When Nerburn appears hesitant to take on the task of creating the book from a shoe box of letters and short stories, Dan’s granddaughter Wenonah, (actress Roseanne Supernault/Prairie Metis Settlement), emphasizes the amount of confidence her grandfather has placed on him.

During the course of the film, Nerburn struggles to capture the heart of Dan’s stories, because he cannot fully understand the emotional feelings that come with each story told by Dan and contemplates backing out of the project to the point he writes a letter stating his regret of not being able to complete the book.

The addition of Dan’s friend, Grover (actor Richard Ray Whitman/Muscogee Creek Nation), adds to the pressure to Nerburn’s concerns about conveying the meaning and feelings behind the stories.

Nerburn’s ambitions to write the book are often dashed by Grover’s criticisms as they ride the dusty back roads of the Pine Ridge Reservation in his old Buick in search of common ground about how to write the book.

At the center of Dan’s stories is the horrific retelling of the Wounded Knee massacre that took place on a frigid December day in 1890, which deeply impacted Nerburn’s feelings about completing the book.

By the end of the film, we learn that Nerburn has completed the book, which Wenonah brings to Dan at the dinner table. In a bit of humor he places the book under the leg of the table to level it and makes a comment about the book being just right.

Although the film is slow-paced, it seems purposefully executed to allow the viewer to fully appreciate and take away their own interpretations of what it represents, whether it is engaging in our own tribal and family history by documenting them, or overcoming what we believe is the impossible when we encounter our own challenges.

Outside of the silver screen, what makes actor Bald Eagle’s life extraordinary, aside from being a familiar face in Hollywood, was the fact that he served in World War II as a Paratrooper with the U.S. Army in the 82nd Airborne Division, which is known at the “All-American,” division.

In July of last year Bald Eagle passed away at the age of 97, he never let the light of fame change the fact that the story of all American Indian people needs to be told and not be forgotten, which is why “Neither Wolf, Nor Dog,” seems to be a role that mirrors his life experiences.
