Former first lady Michelle Obama made a surprise visit to the Huhugam Heritage Center for a roundtable discussion with seven Gila River Indian Community youth and Gov. Stephen Roe Lewis. The Feb. 12 meeting began with the youth and Gov. Lewis discussing education and their plans for the future, but quickly shifted when, unbeknownst to the youth, Mrs. Obama walked in and asked to join the meeting.

"I thought it was just a regular roundtable," Erica Dawahoya, 19,

The youth were under the impression that the meeting would include a guest, but it came as a shock when the former first lady entered to room. "My mind just went blank," Dawahoya said.

Charisma Quiroz, a student at the University of Arizona from District 1, was also invited to the meeting to discuss education.

"I really had no idea that Michelle Obama was going to be here," she said.

Mrs. Obama was joined by Valerie Jarrett, former advisor to President Barack Obama, as part of her Reach Higher initiative, which was launched in 2014 to inspire every student in America to pursue higher education. For the visit, Reach Higher partnered with Yoobi, a stationery and school supply company, to donate school supplies to the 900 elementary and middle school students in the Community.

The youth present were Dawahoya, Quiroz, Jr. Miss Gila River Samaira Juan, Adam Cardona, Andrew Thomas, Daniel Lewis and Karissa Escalante.

Local news outlets were also present and covered the first part of the meeting as the students introduced themselves to Mrs. Obama. The media was then excused while the meeting continued in private.

"My impression of her was that she's a smart and confident woman who is a role model to me," said Cardona.

The youth described their experiences in education to Mrs. Obama and she encouraged them to reach their goals. Mrs. Obama also revealed her own struggles as a young woman, according to Gov. Stephen Roe Lewis, who said the former first lady bonded with the students.

The Tribal Education Department hosted the Governor's 4th Annual Education Summit at the Sheraton Grand at Wild Horse Pass on Feb. 9, which was an all-day summit to receive input from Community members, students, parents and educators.

"I've put on this Summit every year since I've been governor to engage our Community in the state of education throughout the Gila River Indian Community," said Gov. Stephen Roe Lewis.

The summit's theme, "Improving GRIC Schools from Within," promoted the sharing

The summit was directed at parents, grandparents, and guardians residing in the Community, school board administrators, and school staff. It also encouraged the participation of high school students, who have an active interest in the future of their education.

"This is important, we get the input of our youth, parents, and our elders, everyone in the room today," said Gov. Lewis, "The important thing, is that we stay true to who we are as Akimel O'otham and Pee Posh, and how our value system makes our schools better."

He said these are exciting times for the youth, so much is happening at a rapid pace, that they will need the skills to keep

Coyotes Foundation donates to Sacaton Elementary STEM

Christopher Lomahquahu
Gila River Indian News

The Arizona Coyotes Foundation donated $5,000 to Sacaton Elementary School during a game against the Dallas Stars at Gila River Arena on Feb. 9.

At the game, the Coyotes aired the donation on live-television before a packed house of over 13,418 hockey fans.

The donation will go towards the school's Junior Master Gardner's STEAM program for the second to fourth grades at SES. According to a school press release, it is a "hands-on approach," that will teach children about plants, flowers, fruits and vegetables and their purpose in their diet.

Wanda Burton, SES Principal said, "It gives our students a chance to learn by doing things hands-on. This is a huge experience for them, we can't say thank you enough to the Coyotes Foundation for this gift."

"This is a great opportunity to expand our agriculture in the schools to the young ones, that will carry-on our traditions," said Lt. Gov. Robert Stone, who was present to receive the donation.

He said the partnership between the Community and the Arizona Coyotes Foundation, benefits everyone. "Agriculture is our heritage and anything that keeps our children involved in the planting of our traditional foods is important," said Lt. Gov. Stone.

Ahron Cohen, President and CEO of the Arizona Coyotes, said, "It's wonderful, our partnership with GRIC is so important to us and we want to do some positive good for the Community and see the students get involved with different things."

Cohen said that work in the Community is important to the Coyotes organization.

Sacaton Elementary School receives $5,000 from the Arizona Coyotes Foundation. Christopher Lomahquahu/GRIN

"One of our core pillars of our team, is giving back to our local community and what better way than to give back to our major partners, the Gila River Indian Community," said Cohen.

The JMG, includes a curriculum that will teach the students about plant growth and development, soils and water, ecology and horticulture, insects and diseases and landscape. In addition, the curriculum integrates math, science, language arts, and social studies.

The Pee Posh Veterans Association presented the colors during the signing of the national anthem prior to the game, and later the Arizona Coyotes and the National Hockey League launched a month-long campaign called, "Hockey is for Everyone," an initiative to promote diversity and equality on and off the ice.

Coyotes bested the Stars 3-2, to avenge an earlier loss in the season.

Nike N7 Jr. Golf Experience held at the TPC Scottsdale course

Christopher Lomahquahu
Gila River Indian News

Native youth teed off at a golf clinic just yards away from the 2019 Waste Management Open, the Nike N7 Jr. Golf Experience was held at the TPC Scottsdale Champions Course on Jan. 27.

The event, was sponsored by the Notah Begay III (NB3) Foundation, The First Tee of Phoenix and the Ak-Chin Indian Community, and in partnership with Nike N7.

The event was a first for a Native-based organization to host an event in partnership with a high-profile event like the Waste Management Open.

Sam McCracken, N7 General Manager, said, "It's our first ever Jr. Golf Tournament in the state of Arizona. We'd really like to thank our sponsors and recognize the Akimel O'otham land, that we are hosting this event on, [here] today."

CEO of N7 Golf Robin Herrington said, "It's an action-packed day, as we officially launch the N7 Junior Golf Experience."

Gov. Stephen Roe Lewis was present to welcome the group of Native youth, who took part in the clinic.

"The Notah Begay Foundation is a great organization, that encourages the youth to be active in the game of golf," said Lewis.

Lewis also said the junior golf event promotes a positive influence among the youth and aspiring golfers.

To help the kids put a little step in their swing, Nike N7 ambassador and Ladies Professional Golf Association (LPGA) golfer Gabby Lemieux, who is Shoshone and Paiute, provided advice on how to succeed on the green.

Lemieux, has been golfing competitively since last year and will be competing on the LPGA tour this year.

Clint Begay NB3FIT Jr. Golf Coaching Team Director said, "We appreciate the opportunity that we have to be here teaming up with Nike N7 and The First Tee of Phoenix. We hope that you walk away with something special about the game of golf."

Clint said, Notah is very passionate about the game of golf, which led to

Throughout the afternoon, the youth rotated through three different stations, a driving, chipping and putting range.

O'Odham Tash back with new events

By Heather Smathers
PinalCentral.com

CASA GRANDE — O'Odham Tash is a time for local tribes to celebrate their shared heritage while honoring their unique differences.

Some new events will take place at the annual O'Odham Tash celebration this year, which will be held on Feb. 16 and 17.

Event coordinator

Georgette Johnson said a traditional social Waila dance will be added this year.

The softball tournament had been a staple at the O'Odham Tash celebrations, and Johnson said she's excited to see it back.

This year the tournament will be held Saturday and Sunday, although should enough teams sign up, play might need to begin on Friday night. The double-elimination tournament is open to Native players but each team is allowed to have up to four non-Native people, two men and two women.

Johnson said other events will be taking place simultaneously: the social powwow and Toka tournament.

The Toka tournament started just a few years ago as a regular event with the O'Odham Tash celebration, featuring a traditional Native American game. It is akin to a field hockey match; it is a team event with teams still being accepted.

While spectators are welcome to watch the social powwow and traditional dancing, photographs are only permitted with permission.

Vendors, including artists and craftsmen, will be on hand with their wares and different food vendors selling traditional Native fare, Johnson said.

On Saturday night, a concert featuring Native Creed will take place. The concert will begin at 6:30 p.m. It is family-friendly, and children under 10 can attend the concert for free. Adults will pay $10 per person at the gate.

Kevin Juan, who is helping Johnson coordinate several O'Odham Tash events this year, said all of the events are open to families and no drugs or alcohol are permitted at any of the events.

"We want to show the next generations our traditions and history," he said. "When we go to these events, no matter where we're from, we're all family."

To have a booth at the event, contact Johnson at 520-221-5368. To sign up a team for the softball tournament, call Serena Johnson at 520-993-6563.

O'Odham Tash Rodeo draws top notch cowboys

By Maria Vasquez
PinalCentral.com

CASA GRANDE — Spectators should expect two jam-packed days at the O'Odham Tash Rodeo. "The public can come out to watch the best that Indian rodeo has to offer," rodeo secretary Penny Mix said.

Contestants from the Indian National Finals Rodeo and the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association along with amateurs will be competing in different events from bull riding to calf roping and bareback riding.

In the wild horse race, teams made up of three members will attempt to catch, saddle and ride a wild mustang. There will also be a roping competition that will bring together the four sister tribes of the area.

According to Mix, in order to participate the contestant must be a member of the Tohono O'odham Nation, Ak-Chin, Gila River or Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian communities.

There are roughly 10 to 30 contestants per event, with the largest being the team roping and the women's breakaway roping.

This year the rodeo will re-introduce bareback riding. Other events include saddle bronc and tie-down roping. Buckles will be awarded to each event winner.

The O'Odham Tash Rodeo is scheduled to start at 1 p.m. on Feb. 16 and 17 at Ed Hooper Rodeo Park. Admission is $15, children 12 and under enter for free.

Firearms and Community Members on GRIC

Lt. Jason Figueroa #1286
Gila River Police Department

The Gila River Police Department has recently received a number of questions about Community Members' rights and responsibilities while owning and carrying firearms on the GRIC. Here are some answers to some of the most common questions we get on this topic:

-Can Community Members legally own and possess firearms on the GRIC?

The GRIC Community Council has not passed any laws which make it illegal for Community Members to own or possess firearms on the GRIC. However, as a sovereign nation, the Council could choose to do so in the future.

-When is it illegal for a Community Member to own or possess a firearm on the GRIC?

Some things make it nearly permanently illegal for a Community Member to own or possess a firearm. Some examples of this are being convicted of a felony in tribal, state, or federal courts, being convicted of a misdemeanor crime of domestic violence in tribal, state, or federal courts, and being dishonorably discharged from the United States Armed Forces.

Other things make it temporarily illegal to own or possess a firearm. Some examples are being the subject of a domestic violence order of protection (the order is against you), being on terms of release from a court which prohibit you from having firearms (including some kinds of probation for misdemeanor crimes) and being adjudicated as mentally incompetent by a judge. Additionally, if you are under the influence of alcohol or drugs (including prescription drugs) to the point of intoxication, it's illegal for you to have a firearm until you are no longer intoxicated.

-Where can Community Members legally possess and carry firearms?

If you can legally possess a firearm, you can carry it on your own property and in public places which do not carry any legal restrictions to carry firearms. If you're on the property of another person or of a business, and they do not want you to carry firearms, you have to either leave your firearms off the property, or leave the property with your firearms.

Although some buildings and facilities are open to the public (such as the casinos and Rawhide), they are actually considered private property for legal purposes. These facilities also have the right to post signs which prohibit people from carrying firearms on their premises.

Some public buildings, areas, and events have posted notices which prohibit Community Members from carrying firearms. Examples would be government buildings (such as Service Centers, the Governance Center, the Community Courts, and the Criminal Justice Facility), schools, hospitals, and the Mul-Chu-Tha.

-Where can Community Members legally shoot their firearms (target practice)?

You can shoot on their own lands, or the lands of others, provided you have legal permission to do so and can shoot there safely. It is very important that shooting locations have a safe back-stop (a place to catch bullets after they hit their target), are not near residences, personal property (buildings, farm equipment, livestock), or roadways, and allow you to make sure each shot can be safely taken. No litter (ammunition casings, targets, appliances, bottles, etc.) should be left at the shooting site after you're done, unless you're shooting on your own property.

-Are certain kinds of firearms illegal to own or possess on the GRIC?

Most types of pistols, revolvers, rifles, and shotguns are legal to own and carry. Machine guns, sound suppressors (silencers), short-barreled shotguns and rifles (see below), explosives (grenades, dynamite, etc.), and bombs are not legal to possess under tribal, state, or federal law, unless the you are specially licensed by the federal government. Additionally, stolen firearms and firearms which have had their serial numbers removed are illegal to possess.

-What defines a short-barreled / illegally short rifle or shotgun ("sawed-off")?

These are defined by federal law as follows: Rifles must be at least 26 inches in overall length, and must have a barrel of at least 16 inches in length. Shotguns must be at least 26 inches in overall length, and must have a barrel of at least 18 inches in length. Possession of a rifle or shotgun shorter than these measurements is a federal felony, punishable by up to 10 years in prison.

-Can a Community Member hunt on the GRIC?

Community Members can hunt on the GRIC, provided the game being hunted is not a protected / endangered species and you are in a location where it is legal and safe to be and shoot at the game. The Community does not presently define seasons for game. A Community Member's privilege to hunt does not extend to guests or family members who are not enrolled GRIC members.

-Can a Community Member carry a concealed firearm on the GRIC?

No current laws which prohibit carry of concealed firearms on the GRIC.

-Can a GRPD officer legally take my firearm during a contact? Do they have to give it back?

While engaged in official and properly-justified business (such as a police investigation or a traffic stop), GRPD officers can take temporary custody of your firearm. As long as you are legally allowed to possess the firearm, it is not a stolen or illegal weapon, and it is not being seized as evidence or for safekeeping (which can happen during certain kinds of domestic violence calls), your firearm will be returned to you at the end of the contact. Officers will usually return your firearm to you unloaded, and ask you not touch or reload it until they have left the area.

-If a GRPD officer asks if I have a firearm during a police investigation, do I have to tell him/her?

By Community Code, you have to be truthful if a police officer asks you whether you have a firearm during an official police investigation or contact.

Local non-profit organization works with GRIC members on their goals

Emma Hughes
Gila River Indian News

A local organization is looking to help individuals find personal success through workshops and events. Amanda Lyons is a Community member from District 3 and is the founder of 21st Century Native, a local non-profit that works with Community members on ways to better improve and achieve personal goals by providing step by step coaching and support.

Lyons started 21st Century Native after seeing the challenges most Native communities are faced with and wanted to create a way to help and support them.

In 2016, originally starting out as a basketball program to help young athletes develop their talent and reach their goals, with the assistance of her father, Ronnie Lyons, who is also the head coach of their basketball program. Along with sports they now also provide life skills workshops for all ages.

They just wrapped up their January schedule that focused on goal setting, planning and coping with possible challenges for the new year. They currently do not have any other workshops planned for February but will be available with an informational booth at the 57th Annual Mul-Chu-Tha Fair & Rodeo.

21st Century Native

isn't just for Community members; they are looking to reach out to other tribal communities as well and are now looking to offer one-on-one classes for anyone in need of support.

For more information on 21st Century Native, you can contact Amanda Lyons at (480) 708-9249 or 21stcenturnative.net or check them out on Facebook, Twitter and Instagram: @21stcenturnative

GRFD seeking recruits with new SAFER grant

Emma Hughes
Gila River Indian News

The Gila River Fire Department has received a Staffing for Adequate Fire & Emergency Response (SAFER) grant from the U.S. Department of Homeland Security. The Community has been working to obtain the SAFER grant for quite some time and have now been successful.

The SAFER grant is a three-year grant that provides funding to fire departments and volunteer firefighter organizations to help increase or maintain trained firefighters.

The grant is allowing

Gila River Fire Department to recruit 20 firefighter apprentices. GRFD is in dire need of more firefighters due to high call volumes, economic development, and high levels of traffic that comes through the districts and casinos. GRFD currently has four stations in Districts 1, 3, 4, and 6 with the hopes of more in the future.

With the SAFER grant, GRFD is eager to bring in as many Community members as possible on board but the apprenticeship is open to anyone who applies, with limited to zero certifications.

Those accepted will go through a six-month academy, EMT school, Fire Fighter I & II and move on to the academy. The closing date to apply is Feb. 21 and you can apply online at www.gilariver.org

GRFD has been actively promoting the department through Community engagement with a focus on youth, to see and explore the fire service through job and health fairs with firefighters in gear on site.

GRFD is also working to bring back their explorer program which allows ages 14 to 21 gain some experience and mentorship towards the apprentice program.

LA theater company holding auditions for "Native Nation"

Christopher Lomahquahu
Gila River Indian News

A Los Angeles theater company is reaching out to the local Native population for actors and stage hands.

Cornerstone Theater Company and Arizona State University Gammage have partnered together to bring a unique opportunity to the greater Phoenix area for individuals who want to explore their interests in acting.

Cornerstone and ASU have hosted script reading sessions at Steele Indian School Park and the ASU Center for Indian Education for the past couple of months as they prepare an April showing of the play "Native Nation."

"Native Nation," is based on the experiences of Indigenous people from all walks of life. The play is written by Larissa FastHorse (Lakota), and will be directed by Michael Garces, Cornerstone Theater Company Artistic Director.

During the early process of writing the plays, some of the stories are about social issues and customs, topics related to child custody, cultural knowledge and a myriad of issues Native people face, while trying to find an identity in modern times. In between transitions, from one scene to another, the three plays include information about local tribes, like the Community, Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community, Pascua Yaqui and others. The production recognizes the traditional lands of the Akimel O'otham, who trace their ancestry to the Huhugam and how for over a millennia, the Huhugam inhabited what is now the Phoenix Metropolitan area.

"We are definitely looking for people to participate in the auditions that we will be hosting later this month," said Garces, "The play will change throughout the process and the way it will change is hearing back from people, who will help guide us and tell us what is missing and what is exciting and appropriate for the play."

During a script reading on Jan. 27 at Steele Indian School Park in Phoenix, FastHorse and Garces, sat down with participants to emphasize the importance of American Indians' contributions to the play.

"It's very much still in progress and that is why we are here to see what we need to add, we have been coming out here for more than a year and half now," said FastHorse, "We've been talking to folks in settings like this and asking what we should write about and what people need to hear about, about indigenous people in this area."

When the play takes place Garces said the audience will be splitting up into groups and watching different stories told simultaneously, so people can have different experiences and learn from the stories each time.

Garces used this same format previously for the play, "Urban Rez," which focused on the Native people of Southern California living within the Los Angeles County area. It also included the stories of Native people, who moved to LA from places from across the country.

During the LA event, it became something akin to a cultural fair, which gave visitors an opportunity to experience Native traditional food, performances and arts & crafts booths.

For over 35 years, Cornerstone Theater Company, a collection of professional artists and local members, has been producing plays that go beyond the stage with stories based on the challenges and experience faced in local communities.

In their previous productions, several of the actors did not have any theater experience. FastHorse and Garces, said that it adds to the sense of community, when a play is based on real experiences and perspectives found in Native people.

Information about the auditions

There will be open auditions for individuals of all ages and crew members in stage management, set design, sound, lighting, costumes, make-up, production, and other related tasks will be held at the Phoenix Indian School Visitors Center on Feb. 18, and ASU Memorial Union on Feb 19.

In addition, there is a call for models for a jewelry and fashion showcase to take in between the two show times. Seeking models of all sizes and gender identities. Please wear all black and comfortable shoes.

For more information, you can email FastHorse at larissafasthorse@gmail.com or Sequoia Lynn Dance, ASU Community Engagement Coordinator at: sdance@asu.edu, or ASU Educational Enrichment Program Manager Desiree Ong at (480) 965-3940. For each of the castings for actors, crew and models, there is no experience necessary.

them instantly,” said Gov. Lewis.

Mrs. Obama presented the youth with autographed copies of her book, “Becoming,” and tickets to her appearance at the Comerica Theatre in Phoenix for “An Intimate Conversation with Michelle Obama.”

After the meeting a message was posted to Mrs. Obama’s official Instagram account, @michelleobama, that said, “Today I sat down with several young people from the Gila River Indian Community in Chandler, Arizona, home to the Akimel O’otham and Pee Posh tribes. To me, these students are living proof of the power of resilience. No matter what they’re facing, no matter their circumstances, they get up every day believing that they can make life better for themselves, their families, and their peers. I believe in them, too—and I hope you do as well. This isn’t the last time we’ll hear from Samaira, Andrew, Adam, Charisma, Daniel, Karissa, and Erica. #ReachHigher.”

Emma Hughes Gila River Indian News

The Gila River Indian Community participated in the Tohono O’odham Nation’s 81st Annual Wap-kial Ha:Tas Rodeo & Fair in Sells, Ariz. GRIC was represented in the Nation’s parade on Feb. 2 by Gov. Stephen Rie Lewis, Lt. Gov. Robert Stone, Miss Gila River Autumn Cooper, Jr. Miss Gila River Samaria Juan, Haskell Osife Antone

Post No. 51, Keli Akimal Hua Modk Cudkdam (Gila River Basket Dancers) and Achem A’al Indigenous Traditional Pima Basket Dancers.

The parade’s theme was “Celebrating the resiliency of O’odham Himdag through Beauty, Health, and Wellness” and presented awards in six categories: Business, Group, School, Music, Tribal Programs, and Royalty.

Keli Akimal Hua

Modk Cudkdam (Gila River Basket Dancers) won second place in the parade’s group category and Achem A’al Indigenous Traditional Pima Basket Dancers placing second in the music category and both groups had performances during the weekend at the fairgrounds.

Following the parade, GRIC Royalty attended the TON Rodeo and Fair’s Pow Wow and participated in the grand entry ceremony.

Talking About the Weather

In the July – October, 2018 issues of the GRIN the Akimel O’otham Orthography had been published along with the alphabet, vowels, diphthongs and diacritics. These should assist our readers in understanding the sound system and how to speak basic Akimel O’otham. In the coming articles ahead we publish micro-lessons in putting basic sentences together for our readers.

This is the time of year when we experience huge weather changes as the different weather systems passing through our community. The weather is something that we all have in common on a day to day basis as we commute to work, school and in our daily lives. Many community members and other employees work outdoors every day. We all dress for the weather and try to keep warm to ensure that we don’t become susceptible to colds and the flu. Before heading outside, it is helpful to ask someone to check what the weather is like before we leave home. One way to do this in O’otham is by using the phrase “Sha: ‘i chu’ig jek’ked?” which translates into English as “What is it like outside?” Knowing how much the weather changes this time of year, there is a whole list of possible replies including the following:

S-he:pith ‘o (jek’ked).

S-thoñ ‘o (jek’ked).

Ju:k ‘o (jek’ked).

Si:bañ ‘o (jek’ked).

Heved ‘o (jek’ked).

S-chev’gig ‘o (jek’ked).

But let’s say that we wanted to answer the question by saying the weather is really strong in some aspect (“really cold, really raining, really warm). We can do this in O’otham by using the word i:vo at the beginning of the statement. The word ‘i:vo’ or ‘hi:vo’ (depending on location where you live) works like the words “very” or “really” in English in that it gives importance to the action verb.

I:vo (‘o) s-he:pith (jek’ked).

I:vo (‘o) s-thoñ (jek’ked).

I:vo (‘o) ju:k (jek’ked).

I:vo (‘o) si:bañ (jek’ked).

I:vo (‘o) heved (jek’ked).

I:vo (‘o) chev’gig (jek’ked).

Finally, if you wanted to ask a specific question regarding the weather outside, you can ask a simple yes/no question utilizing the original statements from above.

No s-he:pith (jek’ked)?

“Is it cold (outside)?

No s-thoñ (jek’ked)?

“Is it hot (outside)?

No ju:k (jek’ked)?

“Is it raining (outside)?

No si:bañ (jek’ked)?

“Is it sprinkling (outside)?

No heved (jek’ked)?

“Is it windy (outside)?

No s-chev’gig (jek’ked)?

“Is it cloudy (outside)?

Now you have a number of different ways to talk about the weather with your friends and family. Try using these statements and questions with one another to ask each other “Sha: ‘i chu’ig jek’ked?” You can see how much you know now by completing this month’s language puzzle.

Sha: ‘i chu’ig jek’ked? Match the weather statement with its weather element!

HHC represents Akimel O’otham and Pee Posh for Michelle Obama visit

Roberto A. Jackson
Gila River Indian News

How do you prepare for a visit from a former first lady in less than a week?

“It’s been a whirlwind these past few days,” said Shirley Jackson, Director of the Huhugam Heritage Center.

Jackson said they were alerted on Thursday, Feb. 7, that somebody, “high-profile,” would be visiting. Her contacts couldn’t tell her who it was while the staff paused their current projects and immediately started working on the visit. The Huhugam Heritage Center staff needed to accommodate the visitor but also members of the media. Jackson was conferring with what turned out to be Mrs. Michelle Obama’s “people,” and the media about “what would be a good set up and what would really capture the Community within this small amount of time and space,” said Jackson.

As noted on local live news outlets, the visitor was in fact Mrs. Obama who surprised seven Gila River Indian Community youth for a roundtable discussion in the Akimel O’otham Room, which is a multipurpose room used for a variety of functions such as meetings and classes. Mrs. Obama’s staff decided between the Veterans Room and the Akimel O’otham Room as a location for the meeting. The Akimel O’otham Room was chosen for the prominent murals and the location and the position of the tables and chairs for the meeting. Once the room was decided, the Heritage Center Collections staff then began selecting the items and preparing two displays that represented the Akimel O’otham and Pee Posh.

According to Leland Thomas, Assistant Curator and Exhibits Project Manager, the displays contained a balance of O’otham and Pee Posh objects. “All the willow baskets are from the Breazeale Collections,” said Thomas. The Breazeale Collection is a collection of objects from the early 1900s purchased by the Gila River Indian Community. There was also a miniature horsehair basket with a friendship design from the Blackwater Collection. The pottery was from the Arts & Crafts Collection and also a collection purchased from the Denver Art Museum.

“We tried to make it representative of both communities, both tribes within the room,” said Jackson.

Although the staff did not meet Mrs. Obama, images and video of the room and the displays were carried on live television and news coverage of the event. “Our work showed,” said Thomas.

With short notification for the visit, Gov. Stephen Roe Lewis was also impressed by the staff who helped prepare for Mrs. Obama, her staff and the media.

“I just want to give a sincere shout out to the Huhugam Heritage Center staff, Shirley Jackson and her staff they made this happen,” said Gov. Lewis.

The Heritage Center began receiving phone calls following the visit. “It’s definitely brought us some notoriety,” said Jackson.

The main museum and gallery are currently under construction and will reopen next year. Jackson said, the attention, “is a good way for us to keep telling people we’ll reopen next year in January 2020 and please come and visit.”

Drought Contingency Plan moves forward with GRIC interests covered

Emma Hughes
Gila River Indian News

Threatened by a 19-year drought, Arizona along with six other states were given the task to develop a plan to conserve more water that comes from the Colorado River by Jan 31.

Arizona uses water from the Colorado River, which also comes from Lake Mead, where nearly 40 percent of Arizona's water comes from. If water levels in Lake Mead drop to critically low levels, that would mean Arizona could lose up to 17 percent of its water allocation, which is an equivalent of a year's worth of water for one million households.

Since July 2018, stakeholders from across Arizona have been working together to develop the Drought Contingency Plan (DCP) which will help to better conserve and reduce Arizona's water usage and on Jan. 31 a bill was signed by Arizona Governor Doug Ducey, approving Arizona's Drought Contingency Plan just hours before the midnight deadline, which made for a historic legislation.

"The Drought Contingency Plan is the most significant water legislation passed in nearly 40 years - and it was done by putting party labels aside and putting Arizona first," said Gov. Ducey.

GRIC Governor Stephen R. Lewis also signed a water deal that helped allow the DCP to move forward. The water deal will supply water to the Central Arizona Groundwater Replenishment District (CA-GRD) that will help developers in Arizona continue to build into the future.

"What's important about the passage of the DCP, is that the Community interests are covered. It's about stability for water supplies for the future, for Arizona but also for the Community and our water settlement is protected in the process. That was probably the most significant aspects as it applies to our Community that was just signed into law," said Gov. Lewis.

strong adults, our leaders of tomorrow," said Lewis.

He lauded the schools for their tireless work in providing a quality education for the students, that introduces them to advanced subjects like, Science, Technology, Engineering and Math.

Among Lewis' talking points was the construction of two schools at opposite ends of the Community in District 1 and District 6.

The new Gila Crossing Community School in District 6 is still under construction and is scheduled to open in July of this year, a year after the school broke ground on the new site.

In District 1, the Blackwater Community School, is also on their way to constructing a new school. "We are at a turning point in our education, we are constructing, and supporting two schools, that are long overdue for new facilities," said Lewis.

The keynote speaker, Pearl Yellowman, a member of the Navajo Nation, provided insight into her work to promote resiliency within Native communities.

With her background in social work and education, Yellowman has focused on the role culture plays in the development of children, both psychologically and physically. "There's a value system. How do you know the value system of [your] community?" said Yellowman, "Things like culture are a value system and within the schools, it's not an add-on, not an elective, but it's daily lived experience."

She said every Native person carries with them, genetic markers that allow them to be resilient in the face of challenges, a term called "blood memory." Yellowman said it is based on the previous generations experiences, that are embedded in today's generation to succeed at life.

"There are epigenetic markers that show a traumatic experience has occurred, maybe not in our current times, but in the past [we] had to turn some things (genetic markers) off to survive," she said, "To reactivate our resiliency, we have to do similar things our ancestors did."

Along those same lines, Yellowman, said those are the same ways tribal communities, can build individuals, families and schools that promote resiliency.

The summit also included a panel of students who shared their high school and higher education experiences. The students emphasized their role as ambassadors in public schools outside of the Community.

Marlena Whitehair, a 12th grade student at Marcos de Niza High School said, opportunities like the summit are important, because they, "Ask the youth about our plans for school and seeing if we are on the right track and understanding our opinions is important to their success."

At school she said, Native students must be a part of the conversation and being a part of classroom activities to etch a presence in a room with people of various ethnicities.

Napoleon Marrietta, Indigenous Rights and Social Justice graduate student attending Arizona State University, said going to a big university is challenging when you don't know the student next to you. Marrietta said it was an opportunity to educate non-Natives about the surrounding culture, and that we still exist in the modern age.

"When you're in a big school like ASU, at first it was challenging getting to know people, but I found the best way to do that, was making connections with other Natives, especially those from the other O'otham tribes," said Marrietta, "You form friendships and things just seem to get better from there."
